Ralph Tetta
Stand-Up Comic

Ralph Tetta got started in stand-up comedy in the Spring of 1988, conveniently just after the comedy boom had passed and any chance of earning any real money or recognition in the industry had safely passed. After dabbling in radio and improvisational comedy, and writing comedy columns for local magazines and newspapers, Ralph was General Manager of the Comix Café in Rochester, NY for four years. Gypsy feet prevailed, and now Ralph is living the dream as a road comic in comedy clubs all across the country.

Blending a healthy disdain for the frivolous way in which we piss away our national heritage with nipple rings, dumbed-down movies and TV programs with a real sense of humor, Ralph can be found entertaining (and occasionally alienating and causing discomfort to) comedy club and college audiences. He is fast becoming a household name with his unapologetic observations on current events, social issues, and the various demons that plague him, such as weight loss, marriage, and body piercing's.

A Gene Perret (Bob Hope's head writer) disciple with a real affectation for Lenny Bruce, George Carlin, Robert Townshend, Eddie Murphy and Bill Hicks, Ralph tells the truth ("Because I want to") and the truth is not only funny, but it will set you free. Ralph currently lives comfortably with his wife and two cats, Smokey and Snax The Cat.

Some of Ralph's notable accomplishments include a feature role as "Mr. Braun" in the pilot episode of "COURT OF COMMON SENSE" starring Kevin Meaney and John Pinette, a feature spot on Fox TV's Comedy Cabaret, TV Commercials that include "It's Official" for Sprint Long Distance and "Two Guy Fix It" for various auto glass clients across the country, and opening for Police Academy sound effects man Michael Winslow, Bobby Slayton, Jimmy "JJ" Walker, Bobby Collins, Bob Nelson, Dom Irrera, Bobcat Goldthwait, Kevin Pollak, Kevin Meaney, Denis Leary, Bill Hicks, Adam Sandler, Thea Vidale, Norm MacDonald, Angel Salazar, Colin Quinn, Phil Nee, Taylor Mason and many others.
